I just found out that our folks may be meeting on Fri AM to continue to move the project forward - finalize the site choices for field review. Perhaps next week would be better? Just let me know what works.

Paul -- sorry for being slow to respond. Am still digging out from last week.

Am glad we're getting similar reports on last week's meeting. Let's see if we can arrange time for a report back by our staffs -- perhaps after an additional discussion scheduled for this week, I believe.

The shale school is a promising idea and starting in DC makes sense. When we have our call, we should discuss.

I agree - heard the same thing. Stephanie was impressed and positive about the meeting. My folks think Ramona has been a very good add to the discussion, and will be needed as we progress. Thanks for making her available.

I'd suggest that we make some time to discuss some of the other issues you and I have teed up together. Shale school in DC with you and some of your leadership staff could be a good foundation for that. I would be happy to facilitate, and think that it would be positive for both of us and for our folks that need to work together. Could serve as a model that we could use at the regional level if you think it a good forum.

Perhaps we could line that up in conjunction with a progress report on the study in the near future?

Best - P

Paul -- I've gotten good reports on the Tuesday meeting here in DC. It sounds like we made good progress on site selection and have another discussion scheduled. I'm crossing my fingers that we're heading in a positive direction and you and I can step back a bit. Let me know if you're hearing anything different.
